key messages. Development and maintenance of regional, state and local partnerships, including those with beneficiary coalitions, professional associations and governmental entities as well as an understanding of local influences enable ROs to gain access and build collaborative partnerships that might otherwise be impossible. These offices in the field also routinely collaborate with ROs of other Federal agencies to serve the health and human service needs of the public.

The CMS Field is a conduit of information. These offices are constantly scanning and analyzing the regional, state and local health care marketplace and sharing their insights with central office. They not only represent the Agency on a grassroots level, they also represent the grassroots to the Agency. Information and data from the Field contributes to informed policymaking and solutions that make sense inside and outside the beltway.

Protection - The ROs put into practice on a regional, state and local level the protective regulations, policy and program guidance developed in central office. They ensure protections are in place to facilitate the delivery of high-value health care that is safe, effective, efficient, patient centered, timely and equitable.

ROs implement action at the local level to safeguard the health and well-being of our beneficiaries and the trust fund. Through ongoing customer service, patient advocacy and professional relations, they solve problems for beneficiaries, providers and other CMS stakeholders.

Monitoring - To achieve and maintain an affordable health care system, it is imperative that monitoring of CMS' programs and evaluation of contractors/grantees is rigorous, accurate and timely. Through ongoing monitoring of State Medicaid Agency financial claiming, state survey agencies, Managed Care Plans, Medicare claims processing contractors and peer review organizations, the ROs are the Agency's front line in monitoring the implementation of CMS policies and regulations.
